Oliver commented as follows:

- City's stated prime commercially sustaining objective is from being a tourist destination. We are very heavily reliant on visitor sales tax income, whether from our 40,000 person surrounding county area sphere of influence or further afield.
- We have a stark choice of building our tax base back up in order to adequately fund our city, or continuing along a path of unfunded altruism for disadvantaged transients, which alienates tourists and visitors and makes the heart of our downtown, which should be a magnet for visitors, very unattractive.

- Direct paths to this goal are clearing up and illuminating the heart of our city and making it attractive to local businesses and their visitors again, revitalizing the arts center as a destination and encouraging a downtown hotel to be built, which will result in sales tax revenues, local jobs and hotel ecosystem small businesses.
- The city is already outperforming everywhere else in the county for homeless services. If we build up our tax base we will then be able to afford even more philanthropic help for substance abuse recovery and shelter for local dispossessed people who are in economic difficulties., resulting in a win win for everyone.
- Currently we are rapidly heading towards financial and moral bankruptcy in the service of our tax paying city citizens and this needs to be turned around fast, otherwise tourists will increasingly just drive through shabby Sebastopol on the way to somewhere else.
- If our disorganized and incompetent county bureaucrats and their outsourced non-profit services are forced to take over our city we will be in a very serious predicament.
